

JOB DESCRIPTION

Position: Contributing Writer Intern
Department: Communications

We are searching for passionate and creative contributing sports writers looking to build their portfolio writing on sports related topics.

Description

Our contributing writers will be responsible for creating content on the following topics:

- Athletes using sports to promote social good (e.g. non-profits, charitable organizations, fundraising, etc.)
- Current and former athlete career transition (e.g. entrepreneurship, coaching, real estate, education, etc.)

We primarily focus on athlete involvement away from their respective sports, but are open to any current trends and new content ideas you feel may be beneficial to the site.

Required Skills

- Excellent overall writing skills in different tones/style including spelling, grammar, and formatting articles on websites
- Understanding of sports landscape
- Great research, organizational, and learning skills
- Efficient with Microsoft word and Google docs
- Familiarity with SEO, Google analytics, and key word placement
- Open to learning and writing on a variety of topics relating to sports and sports business
- Take complex information and create an easy-to-understand story

Qualifications

- Pursuing an undergraduate or graduate degree in journalism, mass communications, or sports management
- Ability to work under submission deadlines
- Background in sports/sports business
- Ability to communicate over phone in professional manner

If interested please submit a cover letter, resume, and (2) writing samples to:
Aaron Tyson: atyson@vcomgroup.com

